3:15 pm – 4:00 pm: What’s Next?

Penn 1 | What have we learned and where do we go from here? Fritz Mayer, Duke POLIS and Kathay Feng, Common Cause will discuss takeaways and next steps from the conference.
Speaker Biographies

Tamieka Atkins (@tamiekaatkins) is the executive director of ProGeorgia, Georgia’s state based c3 civic engagement table, and a member of the State Voices National Network of Tables. ProGeorgia is a bold, trusted, and diverse collaborative that champions an equitable and inclusive democracy, for and with traditionally underrepresented communities. Tamieka has dedicated over 15 years to building long term sustainable power for communities of color, with a focus on voting rights and quality of life issues.

Vincent P. Barabba (@vbarabba) has been a preeminent civic leader, business executive and loyal alumnus for 50 years since graduating from San Fernando Valley State College in 1962 with a bachelor’s degree in marketing. In 1969, Mr. Barabba founded a Los Angeles-based market research company to provide electoral information to political campaigns from city hall to the presidency. In 1973, President Richard Nixon appointed him Director of the U.S. Bureau of the Census. After a brief hiatus, President Jimmy Carter reappointed him to this role in 1979, making him the only person receiving this honor from presidents of different political parties. Then in 1983, Mr. Barabba received his third presidential appointment when President Ronald Reagan made him the United States Representative on the Population Commission of the United Nations Economic and Social Council. In 2010, Mr. Barabba became Chair of the California Citizens’ Redistricting Commission. He also leads the Board of Governors of the prominent, nonpartisan organization, The State of the United States, which is dedicated to assisting the American people to assess the nation’s progress based upon unbiased data, fairly presented.

Emmet Bondurant is a nationally recognized trial lawyer with more than 50 years of experience representing both plaintiffs and defendants. He is a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers and of the American Academy of Appellate Lawyers. Emmet’s career has included a strong commitment to community service and pro bono litigation, including death penalty, habeas corpus, reapportionment litigation. Emmet successfully argued Wesberry v. Sanders, 375 US 1 (1964) and is currently serving as lead counsel in Rucho v. Common Cause, which held a partisan gerrymander of congressional districts invalid under the First Amendment, the Equal Protection Clause, and Article I § § 2 and 4 of the Constitution, and will be argued in the US Supreme Court in March.

Erin Dale Byrd (@liberaytor), Executive Director of Blueprint NC, is responsible for fundraising, compliance, managing staff and driving Blueprint’s vision for collective impact. Her expertise is in campaign planning, coalition building and community organizing. For two decades, Erin has helped guide civic campaigns to increase the minimum wage, publicly fund judicial elections and implement same-day voter registration. She serves on the boards of Fertile Ground Food Cooperative in Southeast Raleigh, Advance NC and State Voices. She has received awards and recognition from the Youth Organizing Institute, Women AdvaNCe, NC A. Philip Randolph Institute, National Coalition on Black Civic Participation, the William C. Friday Fellowship for Human Relations and won a Local Hero Citizen of the Year from Indy Week magazine. Erin is most proud of her accomplishment as a mother of two young men. She has a degree in Sociology from the College of William and Mary.

Jowei Chen is an Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Michigan. His research interests include distributive politics, executive agencies and legislatures. He has studied how legislators' pork-barreling strategies are shaped by the electoral geography of their districts, and he has examined how government spending influences voters. He is also interested in the political control of executive agencies. Jowei moved to Michigan in 2009 after finishing graduate school at Stanford. He is a native of southeastern Tennessee.

John Curiel is an American politics and methodology PhD candidate at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His research agenda focuses on how political institutions influence elite behavior, policies, and representation, along with the origins and development of these institutions. His dissertation, Redistricting Cartels and Overlapping Ambition explores the way that state legislative leaders employ overlapping legislative and congressional district boundaries as a means to incentivize loyalty. His published research with Tyler Steelman in the Election Law Journal seeks to answer how gerrymandering impairs the constituent-representative link by dividing ZIP codes. Within the sphere of public health, Curiel has published in the Journal of the American Dental Association and British Medical Journal regarding the politics of fluoridation in local referendums. As a methodologist, Curiel seeks to unite spatial and time series analyses in order to dynamically answer how electoral systems, geography, and multilevel governance mediate politics over time.

Kareem Crayton, JD, PhD (@KareemCrayton) is a widely cited and internationally-respected scholar, expert witness and consultant whose work centers on the intersection of law, politics, and race. He is the only American academic with formal training in law and political science whose work focuses on the relationship between race and politics in representative institutions. The insights and analyses from his research and his consulting work in seminal redistricting and voting rights cases in a dozen states (including in North Carolina) have distinguished him as a key figure in public policy debates about redistricting, election reform, and political representation. He was the co-creator of The Redistricting Game, an online educational tool that informs the public about the redistricting process and possibilities for reform. He has served as faculty at several institutions, most recently Vanderbilt University Law School. He currently serves as the Executive Director of the Southern Coalition for Social Justice, co-counsel in one of the North Carolina partisan gerrymandering cases League of Women Voters v. Rucho.

David Daley (@davedaley3) is the author of the national best-seller “Ratfked: Why Your Vote Doesn’t Count” and the forthcoming “Unrigged: How Americans Fought Back, Slayed The Gerrymander, and Reinvented Democracy” (both W.W. Norton). His work has appeared in the New Yorker, the Atlantic, Slate, the Washington Post, Los Angeles Times and many other leading publications. He is a senior fellow at FairVote, an Institute for the Liberal Arts fellow at Boston College, and the former editor in chief of Salon.
A geographer and GIS expert with over two decades of experience, Blake Esselstyn (@districks) founded EQV Maps, a North Carolina-based consultancy dedicated to principled redistricting. Previous projects include providing mapping services to the plaintiffs in Vesilind v. Virginia Board of Elections and converting jurists' instructions into maps in the Duke/Common Cause NC independent redistricting commission simulation. Having once been a high school math teacher, Blake thoroughly enjoyed participating in Metric Geometry and Gerrymandering Group (MGGG) regional workshops, guiding hands-on exercises at three, presenting on software at one, and co-leading the hackathon at another. He also serves as an adjunct professor of geographic information systems at Lenoir-Rhyne University. Blake holds degrees from Yale and Penn as well as professional certifications as a geographic information systems professional (GISP) and a member of the American Institute of Certified Planners (AICP). When time allows, he blogs at www.districks.com.

Katie Fahey (@KTeaFayGala) serves as the founder and executive director of Voters Not Politicians, the grassroots, nonpartisan campaign that ran a successful effort to end gerrymandering in Michigan by amending the state Constitution with 61% of the vote. A 2011 graduate of Aquinas College with degrees in Sustainable Business and Community Leadership, Fahey's career began with SpartanNash, where she created their first sustainability program, and went on to work for the Michigan Recycling Coalition. Feeling divisiveness in politics following the 2016 election, Fahey posted on Facebook asking if anyone wanted to take on gerrymandering, and almost by accident, started a political movement in Michigan. Through this movement, Fahey hopes to show others that positive change can come directly from the people, and that voters across the political spectrum can reform the system, instead of settling for the status quo.

Kathay Feng (@kathyccc) is Common Cause's National Redistricting Director. Feng has led Common Cause's work to challenge partisan and incumbent gerrymandering, through litigation, state-based organizing around ballot initiatives and legislation and creating new platforms for community-based redistricting. As Executive Director of California Common Cause, she championed and won election and redistricting reforms, stronger government sunshine and accountability laws, campaign finance reforms, stronger net neutrality laws, and the voting rights of traditionally disenfranchised communities. Kathay is the architect of California's Citizens Redistricting Commission, leading the multi-year effort to study, write, and pass the two initiatives, Propositions 11 and 20, that created the commission and new community-focused process. She also led efforts that secured passage of California laws bringing online voter registration and same day registration (called conditional voter registration) to the state. Locally, Kathay helped lead successful efforts to improve Los Angeles' matching funds campaign finance system, providing a super-match of public funds to city office candidates that raise small dollar donations from city residents. Under Kathay's leadership, CCC has anchored California's election protection efforts, assisting and independently monitoring elections throughout the state, since 2006. Kathay has been an activist and civil rights attorney in California for more than 20 years. Before joining Common Cause in 2005, she headed the Voting Rights and Anti-Discrimination Unit at the Asian Pacific American Legal Center. She helped the center secure key voting rights, anti-hate crime, language rights and consumer rights laws while also working on high profile hate crimes cases, civil liberties advocacy, and election monitoring and polling. Her advocacy led to creation of the Los Angeles County Office of Independent Review, which provides citizen oversight over the Los Angeles Sheriff’s Department on issues ranging from discrimination to use of force. She serves, or has served, on numerous boards including the California Secretary of State's Advisory Committee on Voter Participation and Outreach, the LA County Human Relations Commission, and the Asian Pacific Policy and Planning Council. She is a graduate of Cornell University, and holds a law degree from UCLA School of Law.

Faulkner Fox (@dfofaulkner) grew up in West Point, Virginia, a Tidewater mill town of 2,500. She studied French and American literature as an undergraduate at Harvard, then received an M.A. in American Studies from Yale and an M.F.A in poetry from Vermont College. She lives with her family in Durham, North Carolina, where she writes and teaches creative writing at Duke University. She is also a voting rights activist, working toward the full enfranchisement of all North Carolina’s citizens.

Ivanna Gonzalez is a first generation immigrant from Caracas, Venezuela raised in Miami. She began organizing alongside campus workers as a student at UNC Chapel Hill where she got her degree in political science and public policy. She is Deputy Director for Policy & Alignment at Blueprint NC where she supports partners in testing Blueprint’s racial equity and collective impact organizing principles through issue based campaigns and pilot projects, including police accountability and redistricting reform. Ivanna was previously a college outreach coordinator for the Common Cause NC HBCU Student Action Alliance. She sits on the boards of Democracy NC and the Ignite NC Action Fund.

Leonard Gorman (@NNHRC1), a citizen of the Navajo Nation, is the Executive Director for the Navajo Nation Human Rights Commission located in St. Michaels, Navajo Nation (Arizona). He oversees a staff of seven professionals to address racial discrimination against Navajo citizens and advocate for Navajo human rights from the local to international levels. Mr. Gorman was awarded the Harrison and Austin Citizenship award in 2014; the criteria for award were based on a person’s influence on Native Americans Voting Rights. In 2017, Mr. Gorman accepted the Edward M. Kennedy Community Service award from the American Association for Access, Equity and Diversity on behalf of the Navajo Nation Human Rights Commission. Mr. Gorman also served as part of the Navajo Nation’s delegation that participated in the review and development of the U. N. Draft Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the Organization of American States' Draft Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. Both UN and OAS Declarations are adopted.

Curtis Hubbard (@curtishubbard) joined OnSight Public Affairs in 2013 after a 20-year career in journalism that concluded as Editor of the Editorial Page at the Denver Post. At OnSight, Hubbard has been a lead consultant for successful campaigns to reform legislative and congressional redistricting in Colorado (Amendments Y & Z, 2018), to open primary elections to unaffiliated voters (Prop 108, 2016), and to restore a presidential primary in the state beginning in 2020 (Prop 107, 2016). In addition to his campaign work, Hubbard’s current and recent clients have included the Center for Western Priorities, the Colorado Classic professional bike race, the city of Boulder Transportation Department, Google, and Snowsports Industries of America, among others. During two decades as a journalist, Hubbard established himself as a leader in both the print and new media environments. Working for news organizations in Jackson Hole, Wyo.; Boulder, and Denver, he received numerous individual and team awards and covered some of the region’s most notable events while developing expertise on politics and policy at the federal, state and local levels.

Jessica Jones Capparell is the Policy & Legislative Affairs Senior Manager at the League of Women Voters of the United States. In this position Jessica works to deliver the League’s message around federal advocacy priorities through lobbying and the development of advocacy strategies. Jessica manages the day to day operations of the Leagues volunteer Lobby Corps, a group of League members from Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia who work to deliver the Leagues message to Capitol Hill on behalf of state and local Leagues across the country. She is an expert on League policy positions and works to implement grassroots strategies in coordination with League members and organizational partners around the country. Jessica Prior to joining the League, Jessica worked on political campaigns throughout the United States focusing mostly on grassroots engagement but also running statewide operations with communications, field and an online focus. Jessica has a B.A. from Culver-Stockton College.

Mayor Vivian Jones (@MayorJonesWF) attended the Woman’s College of UNC (now UNC-Greensboro). She then worked for several years as an administrative assistant, most notably from 1981-91 with Variety Wholesalers, Inc. in Raleigh. From 1991-2001 she was co-owner of Jovi’s Kitchen & Catering in Wake Forest. In 1999 she was elected to the Wake Forest Board of Commissioners and after serving two years was elected Mayor in 2001. She was re-elected in 2005, 2009, 2013 and again in 2017- making her Wake Forest’s longest-serving mayor. Over the past 18 years, Mayor Jones has served on numerous state and local boards and commissions, including the NC League of Municipalities, the NC Eastern Municipal Power Agency, GoTriangle and Capital Area Metropolitan Planning Organization. She is also a recent chair of ElectriCities of NC and the NC Mayors Association.

Michael Kimberly is a partner in the Supreme Court practice of Mayer Brown LLP in Washington, DC and a visiting lecturer at Yale Law School, where he co-directs the Yale Law School Supreme Court Clinic. Michael has argued appeals in courts throughout the country, including four times in the United States Supreme Court. He is widely recognized as a rising star in the area of Supreme Court and appellate litigation. He was recently identified by The Legal 500 (2017) as a “next generation” Supreme Court practitioner and by Law360 (2016) as a top appellate advocate under 40, with “a yearslong track record of effective advocacy before the nation’s highest court. Since 2014, Michael has been the lead counsel for a group of plaintiffs challenging Maryland’s 2011 partisan gerrymander of its Sixth Congressional District. For his groundbreaking win before the three-judge district court in that case, Common Cause awarded Michael its 2017 Defender of Democracy Award, and The American Lawyer named him a “Litigator of the Week.”
Sam Levine (@srl) is a reporter at HuffPost covering voting rights issues across the country. His beat includes issues like gerrymandering, voter purging, voter ID, voting reforms and the 2020 census. He is based in New York City.

Professor Justin Levitt (@_justinlevitt_), Associate Dean for Research at Loyola Law School, is an expert on constitutional law and the law of democracy; he recently served as a Deputy Assistant Attorney General at DOJ, helping to lead the voting and employment work of the Civil Rights Division. He has published more than 30 monographs, book chapters, and academic articles, and maintains the All About Redistricting website; Levitt has also testified before the U.S. Senate and House, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, several state legislatures, and federal and state courts. Before entering academia, Levitt worked at several nonprofits (including the Brennan Center at NYU) and served several presidential campaigns, including as the National Voter Protection Counsel in 2008. He has advised, represented, and sued officials of both major political parties and neither (and those whose partisan preference he does not know). Levitt holds law, public administration, and undergraduate degrees from Harvard University.

Michael Li (@mcpli) serves as Senior Counsel for the Brennan Center's Democracy Program, where his work focuses on redistricting, voting rights, and elections. Prior to joining the Brennan Center, Mr. Li practiced law at Baker Botts L.L.P. in Dallas for ten years and is the author of a widely cited blog on redistricting and election law issues that The New York Times called “indispensable.” He is a regular writer and commentator on election law issues, appearing on PBS Newshour, MSNBC, and NPR, and in print in The New York Times, Los Angeles Times, USA Today, Roll Call, Vox, National Journal, Texas Tribune, Dallas Morning News, and San Antonio Express-News, among others. In addition to his election law work, Mr. Li previously served as executive director of Be One Texas, a donor alliance that oversaw strategic and targeted investments in non-profit organizations working to increase voter participation and engagement in historically disadvantaged African-American and Hispanic communities in Texas. Mr. Li received his J.D., with honors, from Tulane Law School and his undergraduate degree in history from the University of Texas at Austin.

Tomas Lopez (@democracync) became Democracy North Carolina's Executive Director in January 2018. Previously, he was Counsel with the Democracy Program at the Brennan Center for Justice at NYU School of Law, a non-partisan law and policy institute that seeks to improve the nation's systems of democracy and justice. As a voting rights attorney there, he litigated against restrictive voting laws in federal court and partnered with advocates to advance and defend election reforms at the state level. He has also commented on voting rights and election law issues in local and national media. Prior to joining the Brennan Center, Tomas was a fellow with the Southern Poverty Law Center's Immigrant Justice Project, where he was part of efforts that successfully challenged anti-immigrant legislation in Alabama. He also previously served as the Bacon Immigration Law and Policy Program Fellow at the University of Arizona, Rogers College of Law, where he co-authored a report on the impact of Arizona's immigration law on young people. Tomas is a graduate of Duke University and Yale Law School.
Beth Lynk (@Bethnotflo) is director of the Census Counts Campaign at The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights and The Leadership Conference Education Fund. In this role, she is responsible for leading the campaign to ensure that the upcoming 2020 census is fair and accurate. Before joining The Leadership Conference and The Education Fund, Lynk was the associate director of federal communications for Planned Parenthood Federation of America and Planned Parenthood Action Fund, where she was instrumental in driving communications strategy and public narratives for major interdepartmental policy and electoral campaigns – including the successful campaign to defeat the repeal of the Affordable Care Act in 2017 and the “I Stand with Planned Parenthood” campaign defending against efforts to “defund” the organization. Prior to joining Planned Parenthood, Beth worked at The Raben Group, a national public policy firm, directing aggressive and disciplined strategies for leading national non-profit organizations, foundations, and companies. She has also served on Capitol Hill in the office of Congresswoman Jan Schakowsky and worked on the 2012 Obama for America campaign. Lynk has a Bachelor of Arts degree in Communication Sciences and Civic Engagement from Northwestern University.

Frederick “Fritz” Mayer (@Mayer_At_Duke) is Professor of Public Policy at Duke University’s Sanford School of Public Policy and a Professor of Political Science and Environment. He teaches courses on the political economy of public policy, globalization and governance, political analysis, and leadership. In addition, Professor Mayer is the director of POLIS: The Center for Political Leadership, Innovation and Service. Mayer’s research concerns the role of stories in politics. His book Narrative Politics: Stories and Collective Action (Oxford University Press, 2014) argues that shared stories are essential tools for enabling communities to overcome free riding and other obstacles to collective action. He is particularly interested in the role of narrative in global environmental politics. Mayer’s second line of research addresses globalization and its effects, with particular emphasis on the labor and environmental impacts of economic integration. His book Interpreting NAFTA: The Art and Science of Political Analysis (Columbia University Press, 1998) chronicled the history of NAFTA and explores the nature of the political processes that created NAFTA. Recent work has involved exploring the policy implications of a world in which most international trade is conducted within “global value chains,” and in which a relatively few large firms enjoy considerable power in defining the terms of trade.

Dan Magleby (@DanielMagleby) received his Ph.D. from the University of Michigan in 2011. From 2011 to 2013, he was a post doctoral fellow in the Political Institutions and Public Choice (PIPC) Program at Duke University where he was also a visiting assistant professor in the Department of Political Science. His research interests focus on American political institutions particularly Congress, parties, and polarization. He joined the Binghamton faculty in the fall of 2013 and teaches courses on the United States Congress, the presidency, parties and interest groups in American politics.

John Marion (@JohnMarionjr) has been executive director of Common Cause Rhode Island since 2008. In that role he serves as the organization’s lead advocate and spokesperson. During his tenure John has led successful legislative campaigns to reform the state’s campaign finance disclosure system, restore the full jurisdiction of the state Ethics Commission over members of the General Assembly, and create a system of risk-limiting post-election audits.

Jonathan Mattingly (@jcmattingly) grew up in Charlotte, NC where he attended Irwin Ave elementary and Charlotte Country Day. He graduated from the NC School of Science and Mathematics and received a BS in Applied Mathematics with a concentration in physics from Yale University. After two years abroad with a year spent at ENS Lyon studying nonlinear and statistical physics on a Rotary Fellowship, he returned to the US to attend Princeton University where he obtained a PhD in Applied and Computational Mathematics in 1998. After 4 years as a Szego assistant professor at Stanford University and a year as a member of the IAS in Princeton, he moved to Duke in 2003. He is currently a Professor of Mathematics and of Statistical Science. His expertise is in the long-time behavior of stochastic system including randomly forced fluid dynamics, turbulence, stochastic algorithms used in molecular dynamics and Bayesian sampling, and stochasticity in biochemical networks.

Michael D. McDonald is Professor of Political Science and Director of the Center on Democratic Performance at Binghamton University in New York. He is the author/co-author of several books and dozens of academic articles on political representation. He has drawn redistricting plans for state and local governments and testified in federal court on questions racially polarized voting patterns and voter participation in connection with VRA Section 2 litigation.

Keshia Morris (@keshiammorris) is a Program Associate in the Washington D.C. office of Common Cause and participates in the work of the Common Cause national program team and the Senior Vice President. Keshia works closely with members of the Program team on issue campaigns, including but not limited to: Money in politics, redistricting, economic opportunity, elections, media reform, Article V convention and ALEC work. Before joining Common Cause in January 2016, Keshia was an Intern for the national office. Keshia has a Bachelor's degree in Psychology from Florida Gulf Coast University and a Master's degree in Political Science from American University.

Tram Nguyen (@TramNVM) is the co-executive director of New Virginia Majority. She joined New Virginia Majority in 2008. Following the September 11th attacks on the World Trade Center, she helped fight for federal funding for a health treatment program to address the unmet physical and mental needs of rescue and recovery workers at Ground Zero. In 2005, Tram traveled to the Gulf Coast to organize the 30,000+ Vietnamese immigrants whose lives were devastated by Hurricane Katrina. For over 2 years, she directed a recovery program that assisted over 3,000 families by providing cultural and language-appropriate services, and she advocated for the sustainable redevelopment of immigrant communities and businesses in New Orleans, LA; Biloxi, MS; and Bayou La Batre, AL. Tram is an alumna of Barnard College, Columbia University and was a 2010 Lead the Way Fellow at the NYU Robert F. Wagner Graduate School of Public Service.
Sean Soendker Nicholson (@ssnich) is the Campaign Director for the Clean Missouri coalition, which successfully passed the Amendment 1 reform package in November by a 62-38 margin. Sean is also a principal at GPS Impact, based out of the firm’s Kansas City office. He previously served as the Executive Director of Progress Missouri, helping to found the communications and research hub in 2011.

Bob Phillips (@CommonCauseNC) has served as Executive Director of Common Cause North Carolina since 2001. Bob’s work includes lobbying the legislature and building statewide grassroots campaigns for good-government reforms. He is a North Carolina native, a graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill and worked as a broadcast journalist in Raleigh and press secretary for former Lt. Gov. Dennis Wicker before joining Common Cause.

Jane Pinsky (@ncethiclobby) has been director of the NC Coalition for Lobbying & Government Reform since 2007. The coalition, in which Common Cause NC is a key player, works to make government at all levels more open and accessible to the citizens of North Carolina. Since 1978, Pinsky has worked for nonprofit organizations focused on civil rights, women's rights, family issues, tax reform, highway safety, children's health, and as her husband says – changing the world. She has worked with such groups as NARAL, the American Nurses Association and the National Women's Employment Project.

David Price (@RepDavidEPrice) represents North Carolina’s Fourth District - a rapidly growing, research-and-education-focused district that includes parts of Orange, Durham, and Wake counties. He received his undergraduate degree at UNC-Chapel Hill and went on to Yale University to earn a Bachelor of Divinity and Ph.D. in Political Science. Before he began serving in Congress in 1987, Price was a professor of Political Science and Public Policy at Duke University. He is the author of four books on Congress and the American political system. Price currently serves on the House Appropriations Committee and is the ranking member of the Transportation, Housing and Urban Development Appropriations Subcommittee. He is also a member of the Appropriations subcommittees covering homeland security, State Department, and foreign operations funding. He is a recognized leader in foreign policy, co-chairing the House Democracy Partnership, which he initiated to help strengthen parliaments in emerging democracies. In North Carolina, David’s constituents know him as a strong supporter of education, accessible health care, affordable housing, clean air and water, and improved transportation alternatives.

Allison Riggs leads the voting rights program at the Southern Coalition for Social Justice in Durham, NC, an organization she joined in 2009. Her voting rights work has been focused on advocating and litigating for fair redistricting plans, litigating against voter suppression efforts, and advocating for electoral reforms that would expand access to voting. She has litigated redistricting cases on behalf of State NAACP Conferences in Texas, Florida, Virginia and North Carolina. In 2018, she argued the Texas redistricting case in the United States Supreme Court. She is counsel for the LWV in North Carolina's congressional partisan gerrymandering case, and litigated the congressional and state legislative racial gerrymandering cases in North Carolina this cycle. More generally, Allison works closely with grassroots organizations and communities of color as they seek to protect their civil rights and build their political power. She received her undergraduate, Master's Degree and J.D. from the University of Florida.

Prior to becoming President of the UNC System, Ross served as President of Davidson College, executive director of the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, director of the North Carolina Administrative Office of the Courts, a Superior Court judge, chief of staff to a U. S. Congressman, a member of a Greensboro, NC law firm and as an Professor of Public Law and Government at UNC-Chapel Hill’s School of Government. Ross holds a bachelor’s degree in political science from Davidson College and graduated with honors from the UNC-Chapel Hill School of Law.

Micah C. T. Sims (@MicahSimsShow) serves as Executive Director of Common Cause Pennsylvania. The goal of this national nonpartisan advocacy organization is to create open, honest, and accountable government that serves the public interest. Common Cause Pennsylvania has over 30,000 members. Micah is a fifth-generation ordained minister, who has pastored significant African Methodist Episcopal church congregations in Pennsylvania. His ministry calling is not exclusively in the pulpit, but is additionally active in civic engagement and community development. This passion is personified in his work on several political campaigns including as senior staff in the re-election campaign of President Barack Obama. He attended Villanova University for undergraduate studies and Lancaster Theological Seminary for graduate degree pastoral theology and divinity. Micah is a lifetime member of NAACP and, member of American Political Science Association. Micah is married to Rev. Tameaka Reid Sims and they are the proud parents of five talented young people.

Edwin Speas has participated in defending and challenging redistricting maps in federal and state courts on racial and partisan gerrymander grounds since 1992. He is currently participating in the partisan gerrymander challenges to North Carolina’s 2016 congressional map (Common Cause et al. v. Rucho et al.) and its 2017 legislative maps (Common Cause et al. v. Lewis et al.). Mr. Speas served for 32 years in the Office of the Attorney General of North Carolina. He is now a partner at Poyner Spruill in Raleigh.

Tyler Steelman (@tyler_steelman) is a third-year Ph.D. student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill studying American politics and political psychology. His research agenda focuses on representation in the United States, including surrogate representation, descriptive representation, and gerrymandering. His most recent article, “Redistricting Out Representation,” can be found in the Election Law Journal, demonstrates the representational harms that arise when several districts split ZIP codes, leading to barriers in communication between constituents and their legislators. Additionally, Tyler and his co-author, John Curiel, have recently completed a geo-stats package that aids researchers facing Modifiable Areal Unit Problems by using population distributions to assign sub-state units to political Celina Stewart (@41acreslaw) develops and implements League political strategies and policy positions around election reform, redistricting, and voting rights issues; oversees prospective litigation for the national and state leagues; and serves as lead lobbyist and liaison with Congress. Prior to joining the League, she was acting Chief Operating Officer and Director of Philanthropy at an electoral reform nonprofit; served as a litigation consultant to several Am 100 law firms handling complex merger and acquisition transactions; was legislative aide at the Michigan legislature handling the public interest portfolio for the House Tax Chair; and Legal Counsel to the Minority Leader Stacey Abrams at the Georgia House of Representatives. As Legal Counsel, she was appointed to Reapportionment Counsel where she led a team of technical mappers and legal assistants to draw alternative redistricting maps in compliance with Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. After returning to DC in 2012, she served as Director for the Congressional Black Caucus Institute’s 21stCentury program, working with corporate giants and Members of Congress to produce the Annual Report, offering policy guidance aimed at improving minority communities that’s presented to the POTUS and Cabinet members.

David Thornburgh (@davidthornburgh) is an accomplished civic entrepreneur. He is currently President and CEO of the Committee of Seventy, the Philadelphia-based good government group. There he launched Draw the Lines PA, a statewide public mapping competition that pushed back on partisan gerrymandering by equipping citizens with the digital tools to draw political maps themselves. Before C70, Thornburgh was Executive Director of the University of Pennsylvania's Fels Institute of Government. There he doubled applications to the program and created a national Public Policy Challenge student competition in partnership with Governing magazine. He served as Executive Director of the Economy League of Greater Philadelphia, where he co-founded Graduate! Philadelphia to encourage adults to complete a college degree, and also Campus Philly to increase the magnetic pull of the Philadelphia region for college graduates. Earlier, he was Director of the Wharton Small Business Development Center, where he founded The Enterprise Center, a nationally-recognized business accelerator for minority entrepreneurs, and co-founded the Philadelphia 100, an annual celebration of the region's fastest-growing new companies. Thornburgh has a B.A. in political science from Haverford College and an MPP from Harvard Kennedy School.

Ben Thorpe is an associate at Bondurant, Mixson & Elmore in Atlanta, GA. While he principally represents plaintiffs and defendants in complex commercial litigation, Ben also has an active public interest practice that includes representing the plaintiffs in Common Cause, et al. v. Rucho, et al., currently before the U.S. Supreme Court. Prior to joining Bondurant, Ben served as a law clerk to the Honorable Frank M. Hull in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit and received his law degree for the University of Georgia School of Law.
Daniel P. Tokaji (@Title52Law) is Associate Dean for Faculty and Charles W. Ebersold and Florence Whitcomb Ebersold Professor of Constitutional Law at The Ohio State University Moritz College of Law. He writes about voting rights, political equality, free speech and association, and the role of federal courts in protecting democracy. Professor Tokaji is co-author of Election Law: Cases and Materials (6th ed. 2017) and the author of Election Law in a Nutshell (2d ed. 2016). He is also author of many law review articles and essays, including “Gerrymandering and Association,” 59 Wm. & Mary. L. Rev. 2159 (2018) and “Vote Dissociation,” 127 Yale L.J. F. 761 (2018). A graduate of Harvard College and Yale Law School, Professor Tokaji clerked for the Honorable Stephen Reinhardt of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, then litigated civil rights and civil liberties cases at the ACLU of Southern California before arriving at Ohio State.

Catherine Turcer (@CatherineTurcer) is the executive director for Common Cause Ohio, a grassroots organization devoted to open and accountable government. She has advocated for redistricting reform since the mid-1990s and received the Midwest Democracy Network Advocate award in 2012 for her work on the 2009 and 2011 redistricting competitions in Ohio. She coordinates the Fair Districts = Fair Elections Coalition which successfully passed state legislative redistricting in 2015 and congressional redistricting reform in 2018. Catherine is on the governing board of the Ohio Coalition for Open Government and serves on Move to Amend Ohio's coordinating committee. In 2006, Catherine received the Spirit of Democracy Award from the Ohio Secretary of State.

Arturo Vargas (@ArturoNALEO) is the Chief Executive Officer of the National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials (NALEO) Educational Fund a national non-profit, non-partisan organization that strengthens American democracy by promoting the full participation of Latinos in civic life. He also serves as the Chief Executive Officer of NALEO, an affiliated national membership organization of Latino policymakers and their supporters. Arturo has held these positions since 1994. Prior to joining NALEO Educational Fund, Arturo held various positions at the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund (MALDEF), including Vice President for Community Education and Public Policy. In this role he supervised and directed MALDEF’s community education and leadership development programs. Before joining MALDEF, Arturo was the Senior Education Policy Analyst at the National Council of La Raza (NCLR) in Washington, D.C. Arturo is a nationally recognized expert in Latino demographic trends, electoral participation, voting rights, the Census, and redistricting. Arturo holds a master’s degree in Education and a bachelor’s degree in History and Spanish from Stanford University. He is from Los Angeles, and was born in El Paso, Texas.

Dan Vicuña (@danvicuna) conducts research and provides legal, communications and coalition support for Common Cause state organizations in their campaigns to implement redistricting reform. On the litigation front, he manages Common Cause and ally amicus briefs for cases seeking to protect citizen-centered redistricting reforms, advance constitutional challenges to partisan gerrymandering, and other redistricting cases. These include Arizona Legislature v. Arizona Independent Redistricting Commission, Evenwel v. Abbott, Gill v. Whitford, Benisek v. Lamone, Abbott v. Perez, and others. Before joining Common Cause, Dan was a staff attorney and Campus Vote Project coordinator at the Fair Elections Legal Network, analyzed
Supreme Court cases at Alliance for Justice, worked in a New Hampshire congressional campaign and for the League of Conservation Voters. Dan has a law degree from American University and a B.A. in political science from UCLA.

Sam Wang (@SamWangPhD) is director of the Princeton Gerrymandering Project (gerrymander.princeton.edu), which combines law and data to assist in redistricting reform. A professor of neuroscience, he holds affiliations with the Center for Information Technology Policy and the Program in Law and Public Affairs. He attended Caltech for a bachelor’s in physics and Stanford for a Ph.D. in neuroscience. His research has been supported by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, the W.M. Keck Foundation, and the Rita Allen Foundation. He has made pioneering contributions to the use of election and polling data to track political races (election.princeton.edu). His work on redistricting has been published in the Stanford Law Review, the Election Law Journal, and the Harvard Law Review Blog. He is now working on OpenPrecincts, a data project to empower citizen-driven redistricting.

Reggie Weaver (@ReggieAWeaver) is the Civic Engagement Coordinator with Common Cause NC. His work focuses on election protection, redistricting education, and base-building in the Triad region. With an emphasis on black and brown communities, he seeks to build a broader electorate, giving all people equal access to the democratic process.

La'Meshia “LA” Whittington-Kaminski is the North Carolina Campaigner with Friends of the Earth. LA fights against unjust redistricting by developing and implementing campaigns and grassroots leadership throughout environmental communities in North Carolina. As a North Carolina native with a decade of experience as an educator and organizer, LA has worked the majority of her life in the fight for social change and equity for all North Carolinians. She is the founder of TW2 Inc. 501© 3, she served as political analyst for various state and local elections, a redistricting expert for Democracy NC, a BluePrint NC fellow, and a college lecturer. LA earned her B.A. from Meredith College. She enjoys playing music from over 6 instruments, spending time with family, including her 2 dogs Lele and Rogue.

Thomas (Tom) Wolf (@tomTMwolf) is Counsel with the Democracy Program, where his work focuses on redistricting and the census. An experienced constitutional lawyer and legal strategist, Tom advises on litigation strategy and legal policy matters, leads amicus strategies for cases in federal and state courts throughout the country, and regularly participates as an amicus in cases before the United States Supreme Court. Tom’s articles and op-eds on the census, gerrymandering, and other legal issues have appeared in Time, The Washington Post, The Los Angeles Times, The Stanford Technology Law Review, The New York Daily News, SCOTUSblog, and other outlets. He has appeared on TV and radio and has been quoted in numerous national media outlets. He regularly speaks at leading universities, law schools, and public policy schools. Prior to joining the Brennan Center, Tom was a member of the Supreme Court & Appellate group at Mayer Brown LLP, where his practice focused on constitutional litigation and legal strategy. He began his legal career as a clerk for Senior Judge Guido Calabresi of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Visiting Durham

Duke University
Duke is one of the most prestigious universities in the country, consistently included near the top of the U.S. News & World Reports’ college rankings. Originally named Trinity College, it moved to Durham in 1892. In 1924, the Duke family endowed the college with $40 million and it expanded to become Duke University, whose three campuses now frame Downtown Durham.

Sarah P. Duke Gardens
The Sarah P. Duke Gardens consist of approximately 55 acres of landscaped and wooded areas at Duke University. There are 5 miles of allées, walks, and pathways throughout the gardens.

Duke University Chapel
Duke Chapel is the most visible piece of Duke University’s architectural beauty. Its tower soars 210 feet above West Campus, making this neoGothic building an awe-inspiring sight.

Duke Basketball Museum & Sports Hall of Fame
The Blue Devils have won four NCAA championships and over 20 ACC tournaments and produced dozens of All Americans and nine national players of the year, all in addition to having a hall of fame coach in Mike Krzyzewski. You can see the trophies, the memorabilia, the videos, and more behind this storied history at the Duke Basketball Museum.

Duke Lemur Center
Lemurs are native only to Madagascar, where they evolved in isolation from other primates. But luckily for Durham locals and visitors, you don’t have to travel to the Indian Ocean to find a lemur: just head to the Duke Lemur Center (DLC) where there are 250 individuals from 21 different species – the largest collection of lemurs anywhere in the world outside of Madagascar.

American Tobacco Historic District
The former home of the Lucky Strike cigarette factory has been transformed into a one-million-sq.-ft. entertainment district, complete with apartments and offices in addition to restaurants, a documentary theater, a barber shop, a basketball court, plenty of open green common space under the iconic Lucky Strike smokestack, and more.

Durham Bulls Athletic Park
Nationally acclaimed home of the Durham Bulls Triple-A baseball club, made famous by the 1988 movie Bull Durham. DBAP includes a 32foot high left field wall dubbed the Blue Monster, complete with a towering bull on top, terrific views from each of the 10,000 seats in the park.

Duke Homestead
See the early home, factories, and farm where Washington Duke first grew and processed tobacco.

Bennett Place State Historic Site
Bennett Place is the site of the largest troop surrender and the effective end of the Civil War. It was in April 1865 that Confederate general Joseph E. Johnston and his Union adversary, General William T. Sherman decided to meet in Durham at Bennett Place, where Gen. Johnston surrendered the Southern armies in the Carolinas, Florida, and Georgia.

Ninth Street Shopping District
Situated between Duke’s East and West Campuses, the Ninth Street district is a slice of Durham with a college feel. Featuring unique and independent stores and also plenty to eat and drink.
Nasher Museum of Art
Duke University’s focal point for visual arts is the 65,000-sq.-ft., Rafael Viñoly-designed Nasher Museum of Art. The permanent collection includes Medieval art, pre-Columbian American works, classical pieces, and an ever-growing list of modern and contemporary works.

Eno River State Park
The Eno River flows through Durham for 33 miles before eventually ending up in Falls Lake, on the eastern edge of the county. This park, only 10 miles from Downtown Durham, offers terrific access for those who wish to experience the natural beauty the region has to offer.

Museum of Life and Science
The 84 acres that encompass the Museum of Life and Science are packed full of attractions designed to spark wonder and curiosity in guests.

Durham Performing Arts Center
DPAC truly has something for everyone, hosting over 180 performances a year, including spectacular touring Broadway productions, high-profile concert and comedy events, family shows, and the heralded American Dance Festival.
